Alerts

Alerts display alert messages to users. They provide actionable feedback and suggestions for users to take in order to complete a task.

Badges

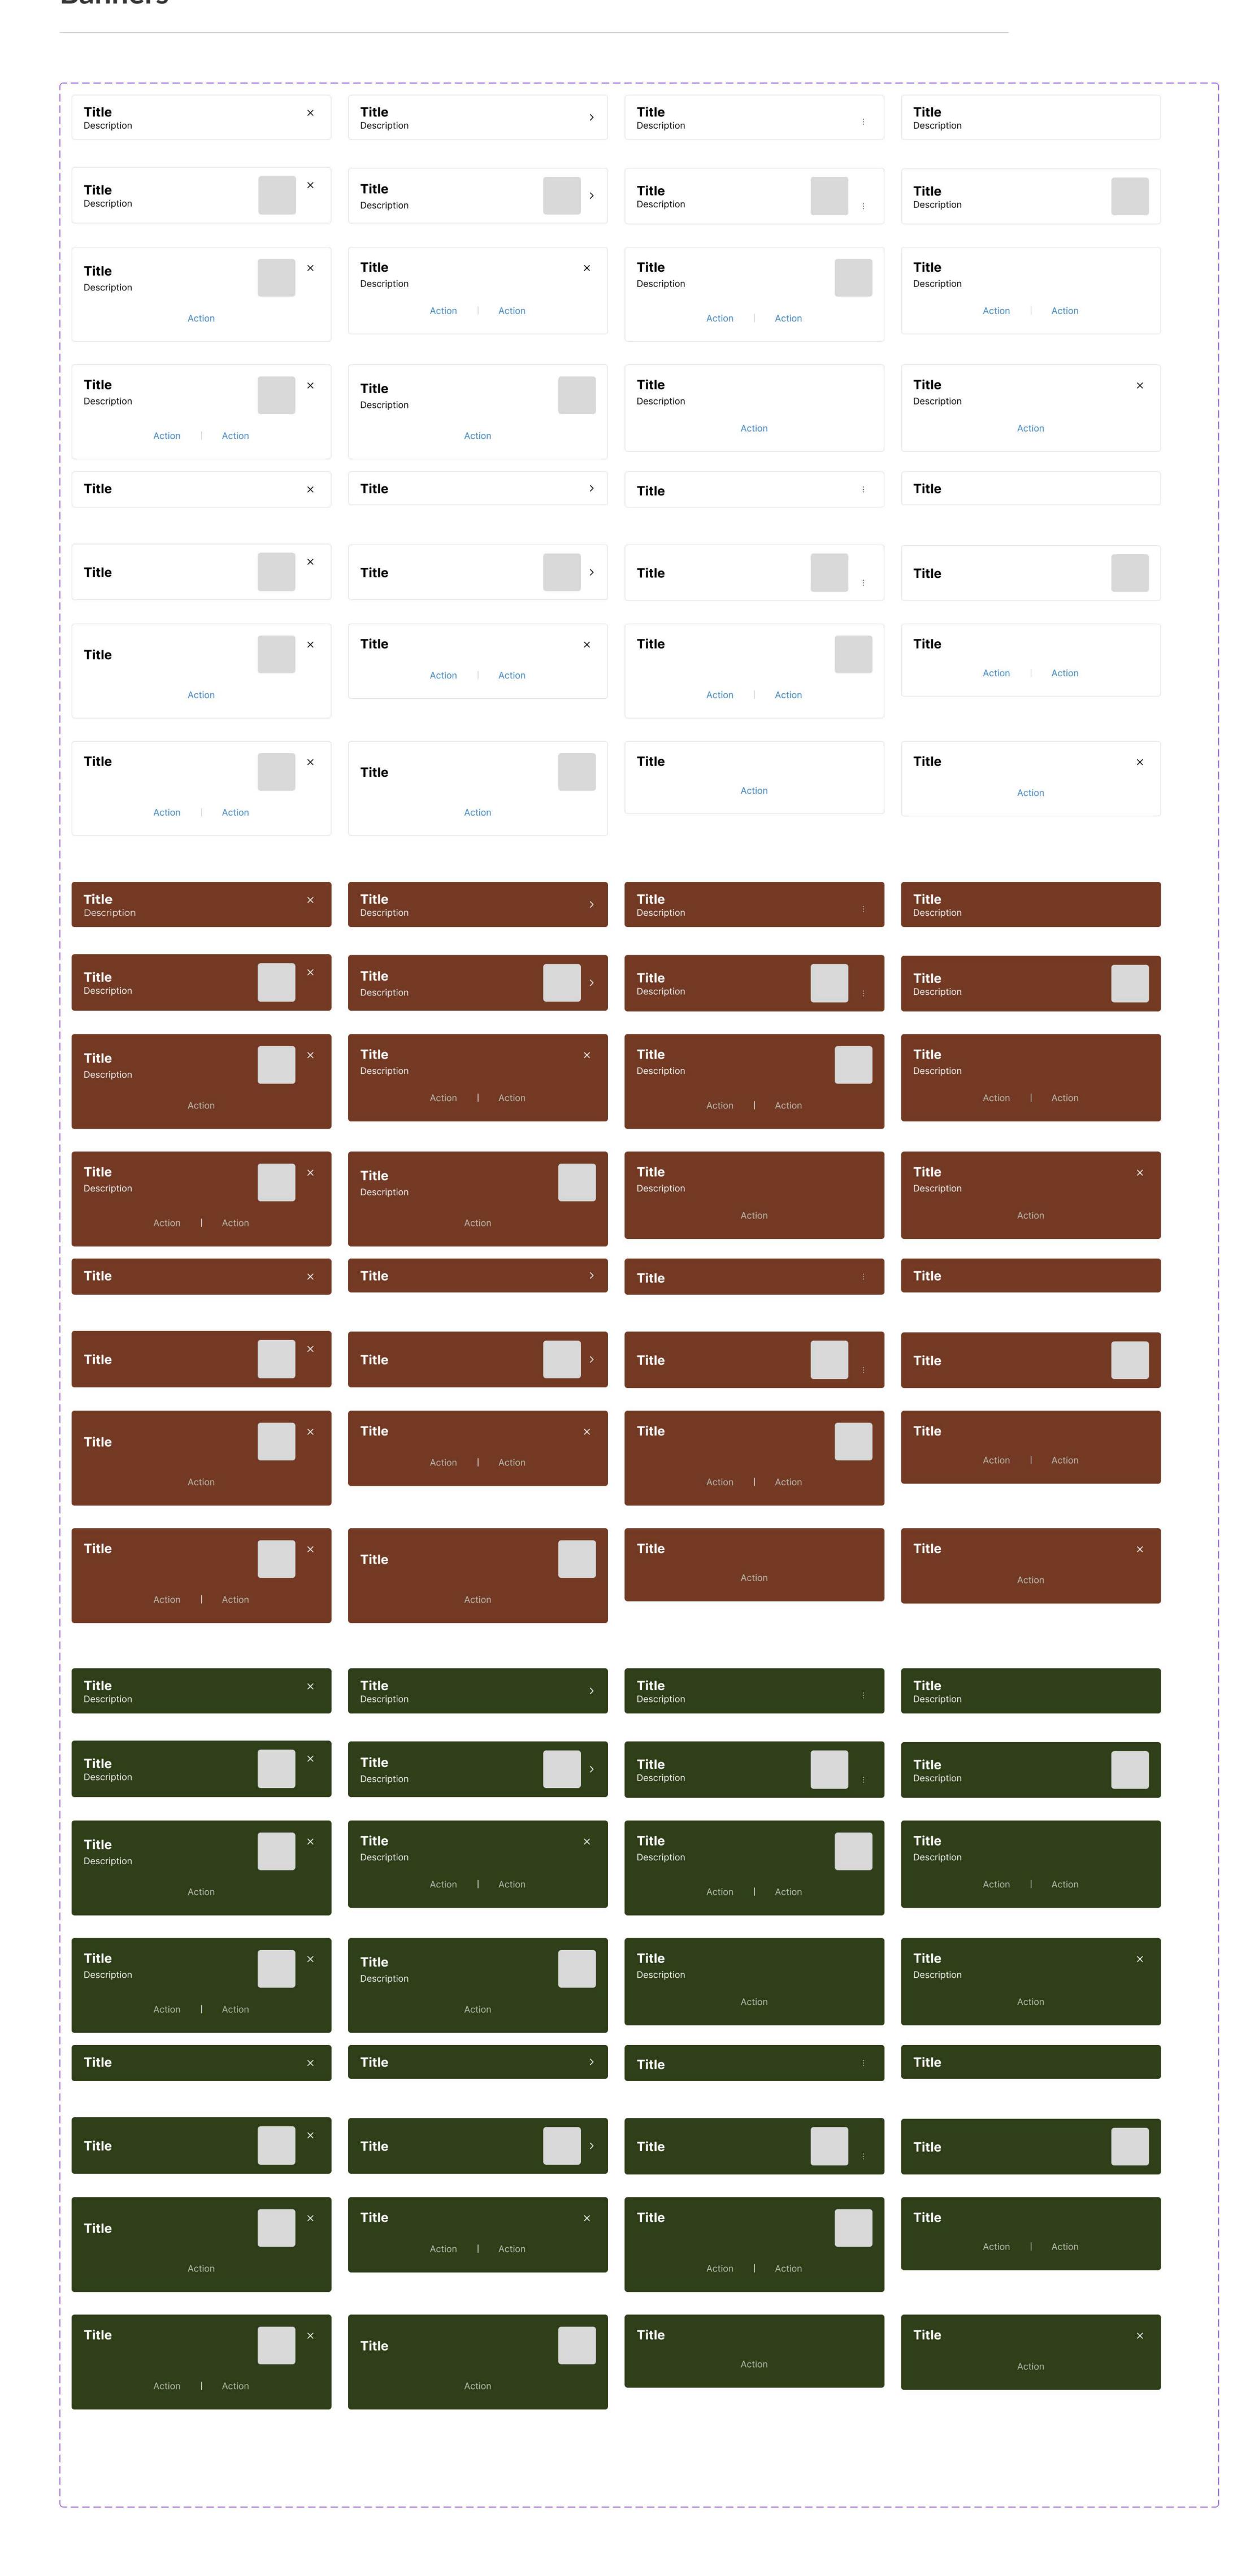

Small numerical value or status descriptor for UI elements.

When To Use

Badge normally appears in proximity to notifications or user avatars with eye-catching appeal, typically displaying unread messages count.

Banners

Bottom Nav Bar

Navigation bars (nav bars) provide access to three to five destinations. One navigation destination is always active.

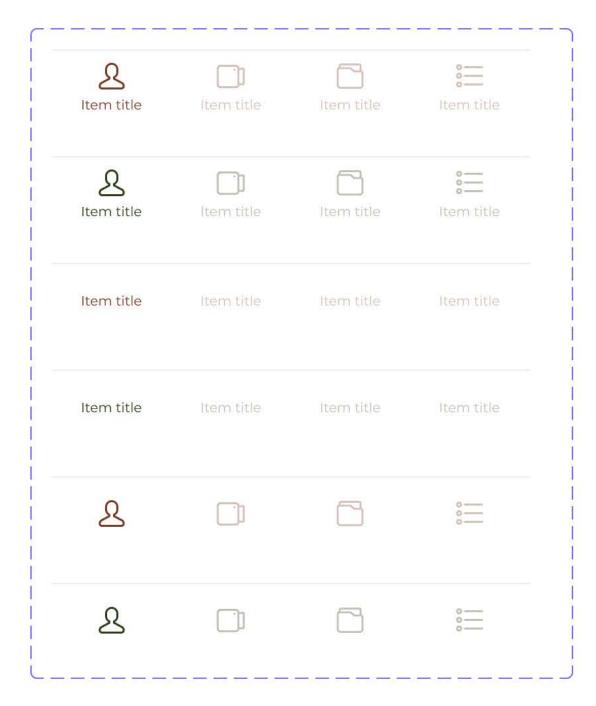

UI Location: The nav bar is positioned at the bottom of screens for convenient access. Each destination is represented by an icon and optional text label.

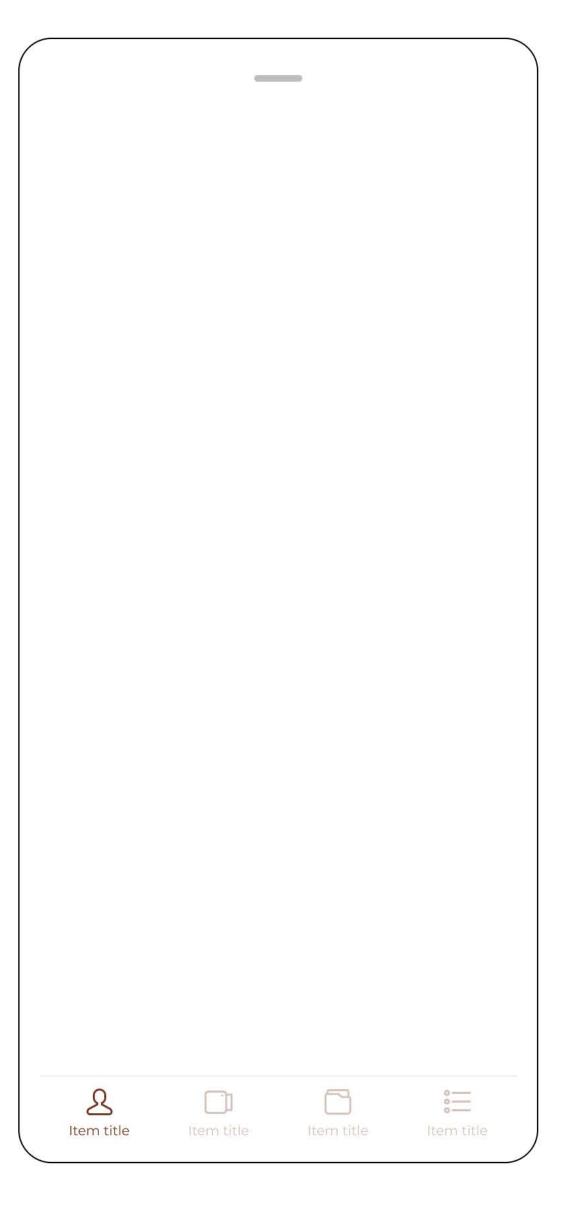

Usage: When a navigation bar icon is tapped or focused, the user is taken to the navigation destination associated with that icon.

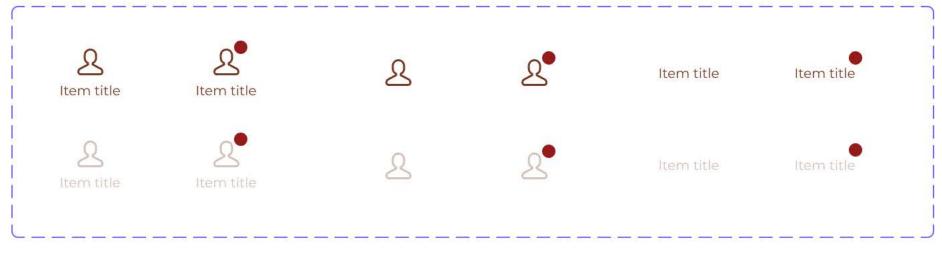

- · Top-level destinations that need to be accessible from anywhere in the app
- Three to five destinations

Navigation bars shouldn't be used for:

- · Single tasks, such as viewing a single email
- User preferences or settings

Buttons

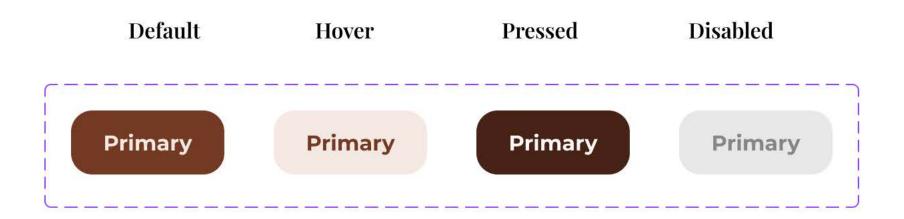

Primary buttons are used to emphasize on "complete" or "recommended" actions. There is at most one primary button per button group.

Default button: indicate a series of actions without priority.

Hover button: when mouse is hovered over the button. Not for mobile or tablet use!

Pressed button: used when pressed with a finger or clicked by a mouse

Disabled button: used when the button is non-functional

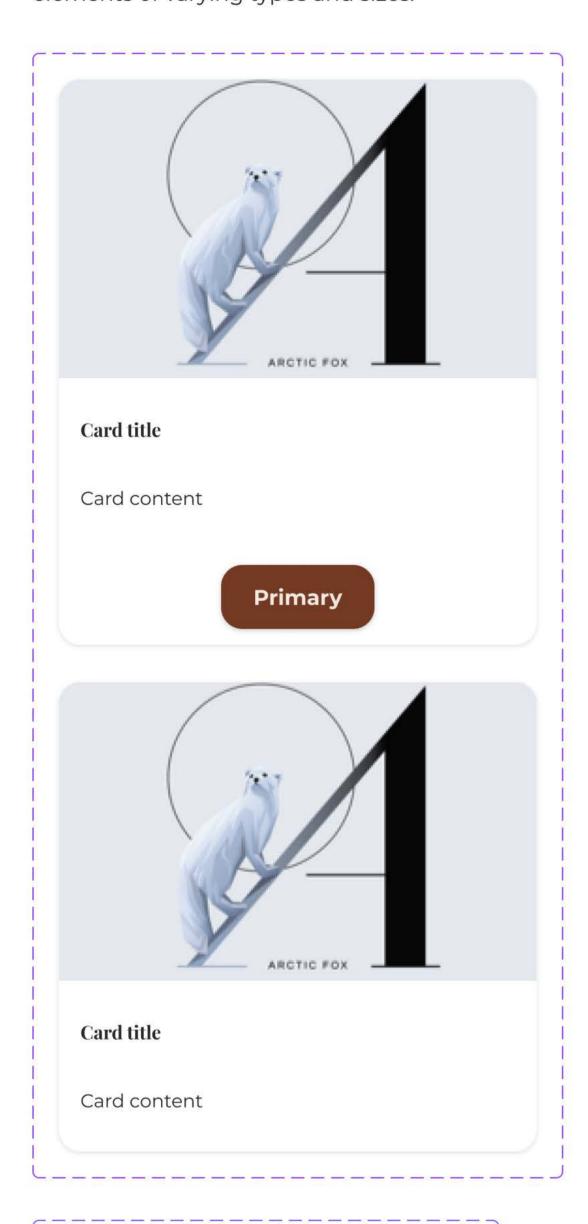

Text buttons have low emphasis.

Text button

Cards

A card can be used to display content related to a single subject. The content can consist of multiple elements of varying types and sizes.

Card content

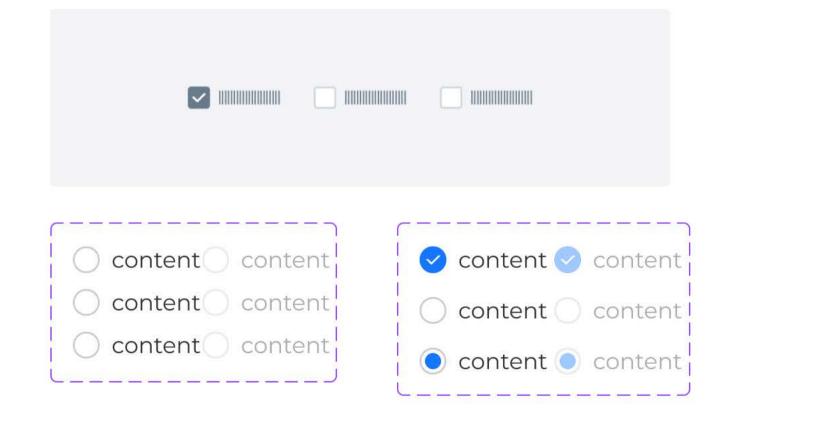

Primary

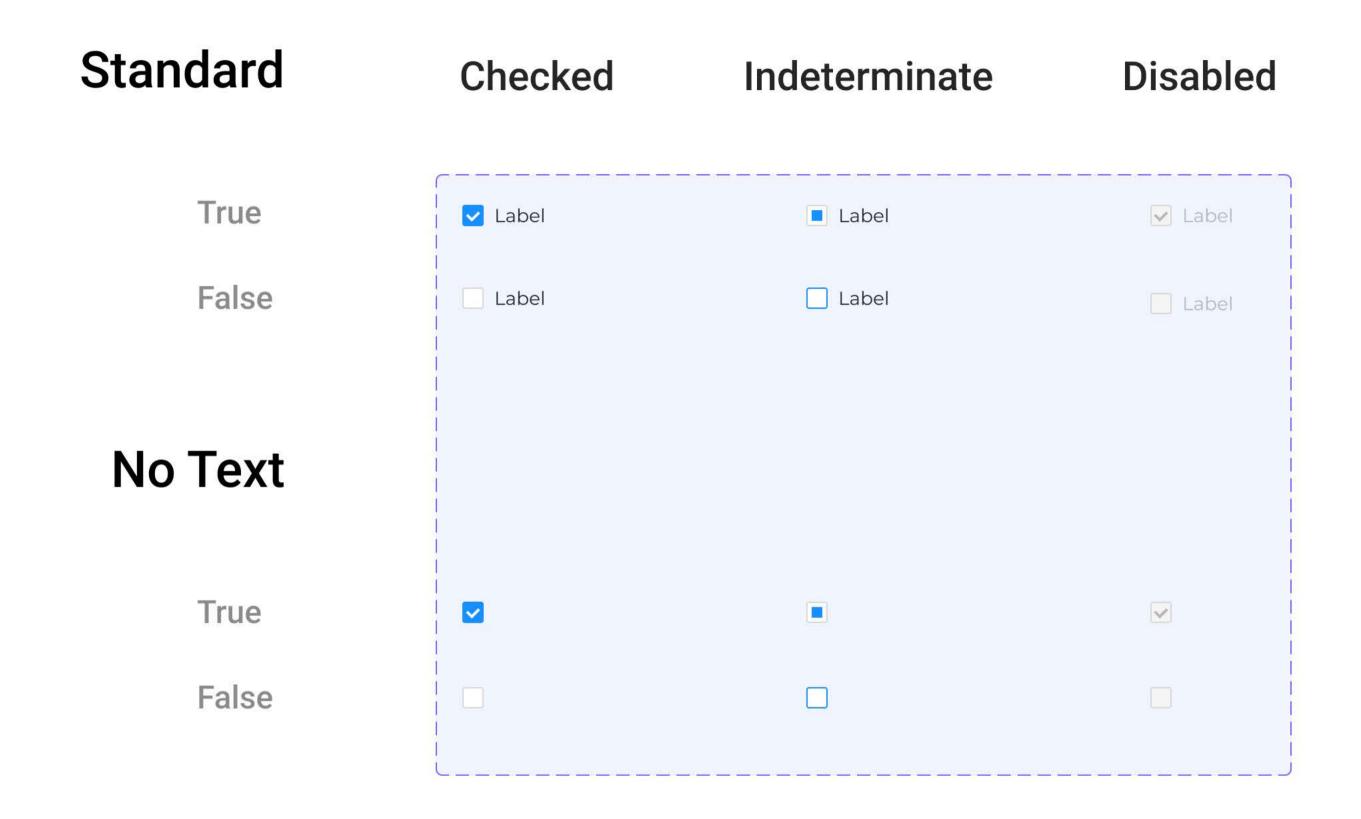

Checkboxes

Checkboxes are used to select multiple values from several options.

Note: Checkboxes often works together with submit action for state.

A single checkbox can represent the switch of two states.

Chips/Tags

Chips/Tags allow users to enter information, make selections, filter content, or trigger actions. While buttons are expected to appear consistently and with familiar calls to action, chips should appear dynamically as a group of multiple interactive elements.

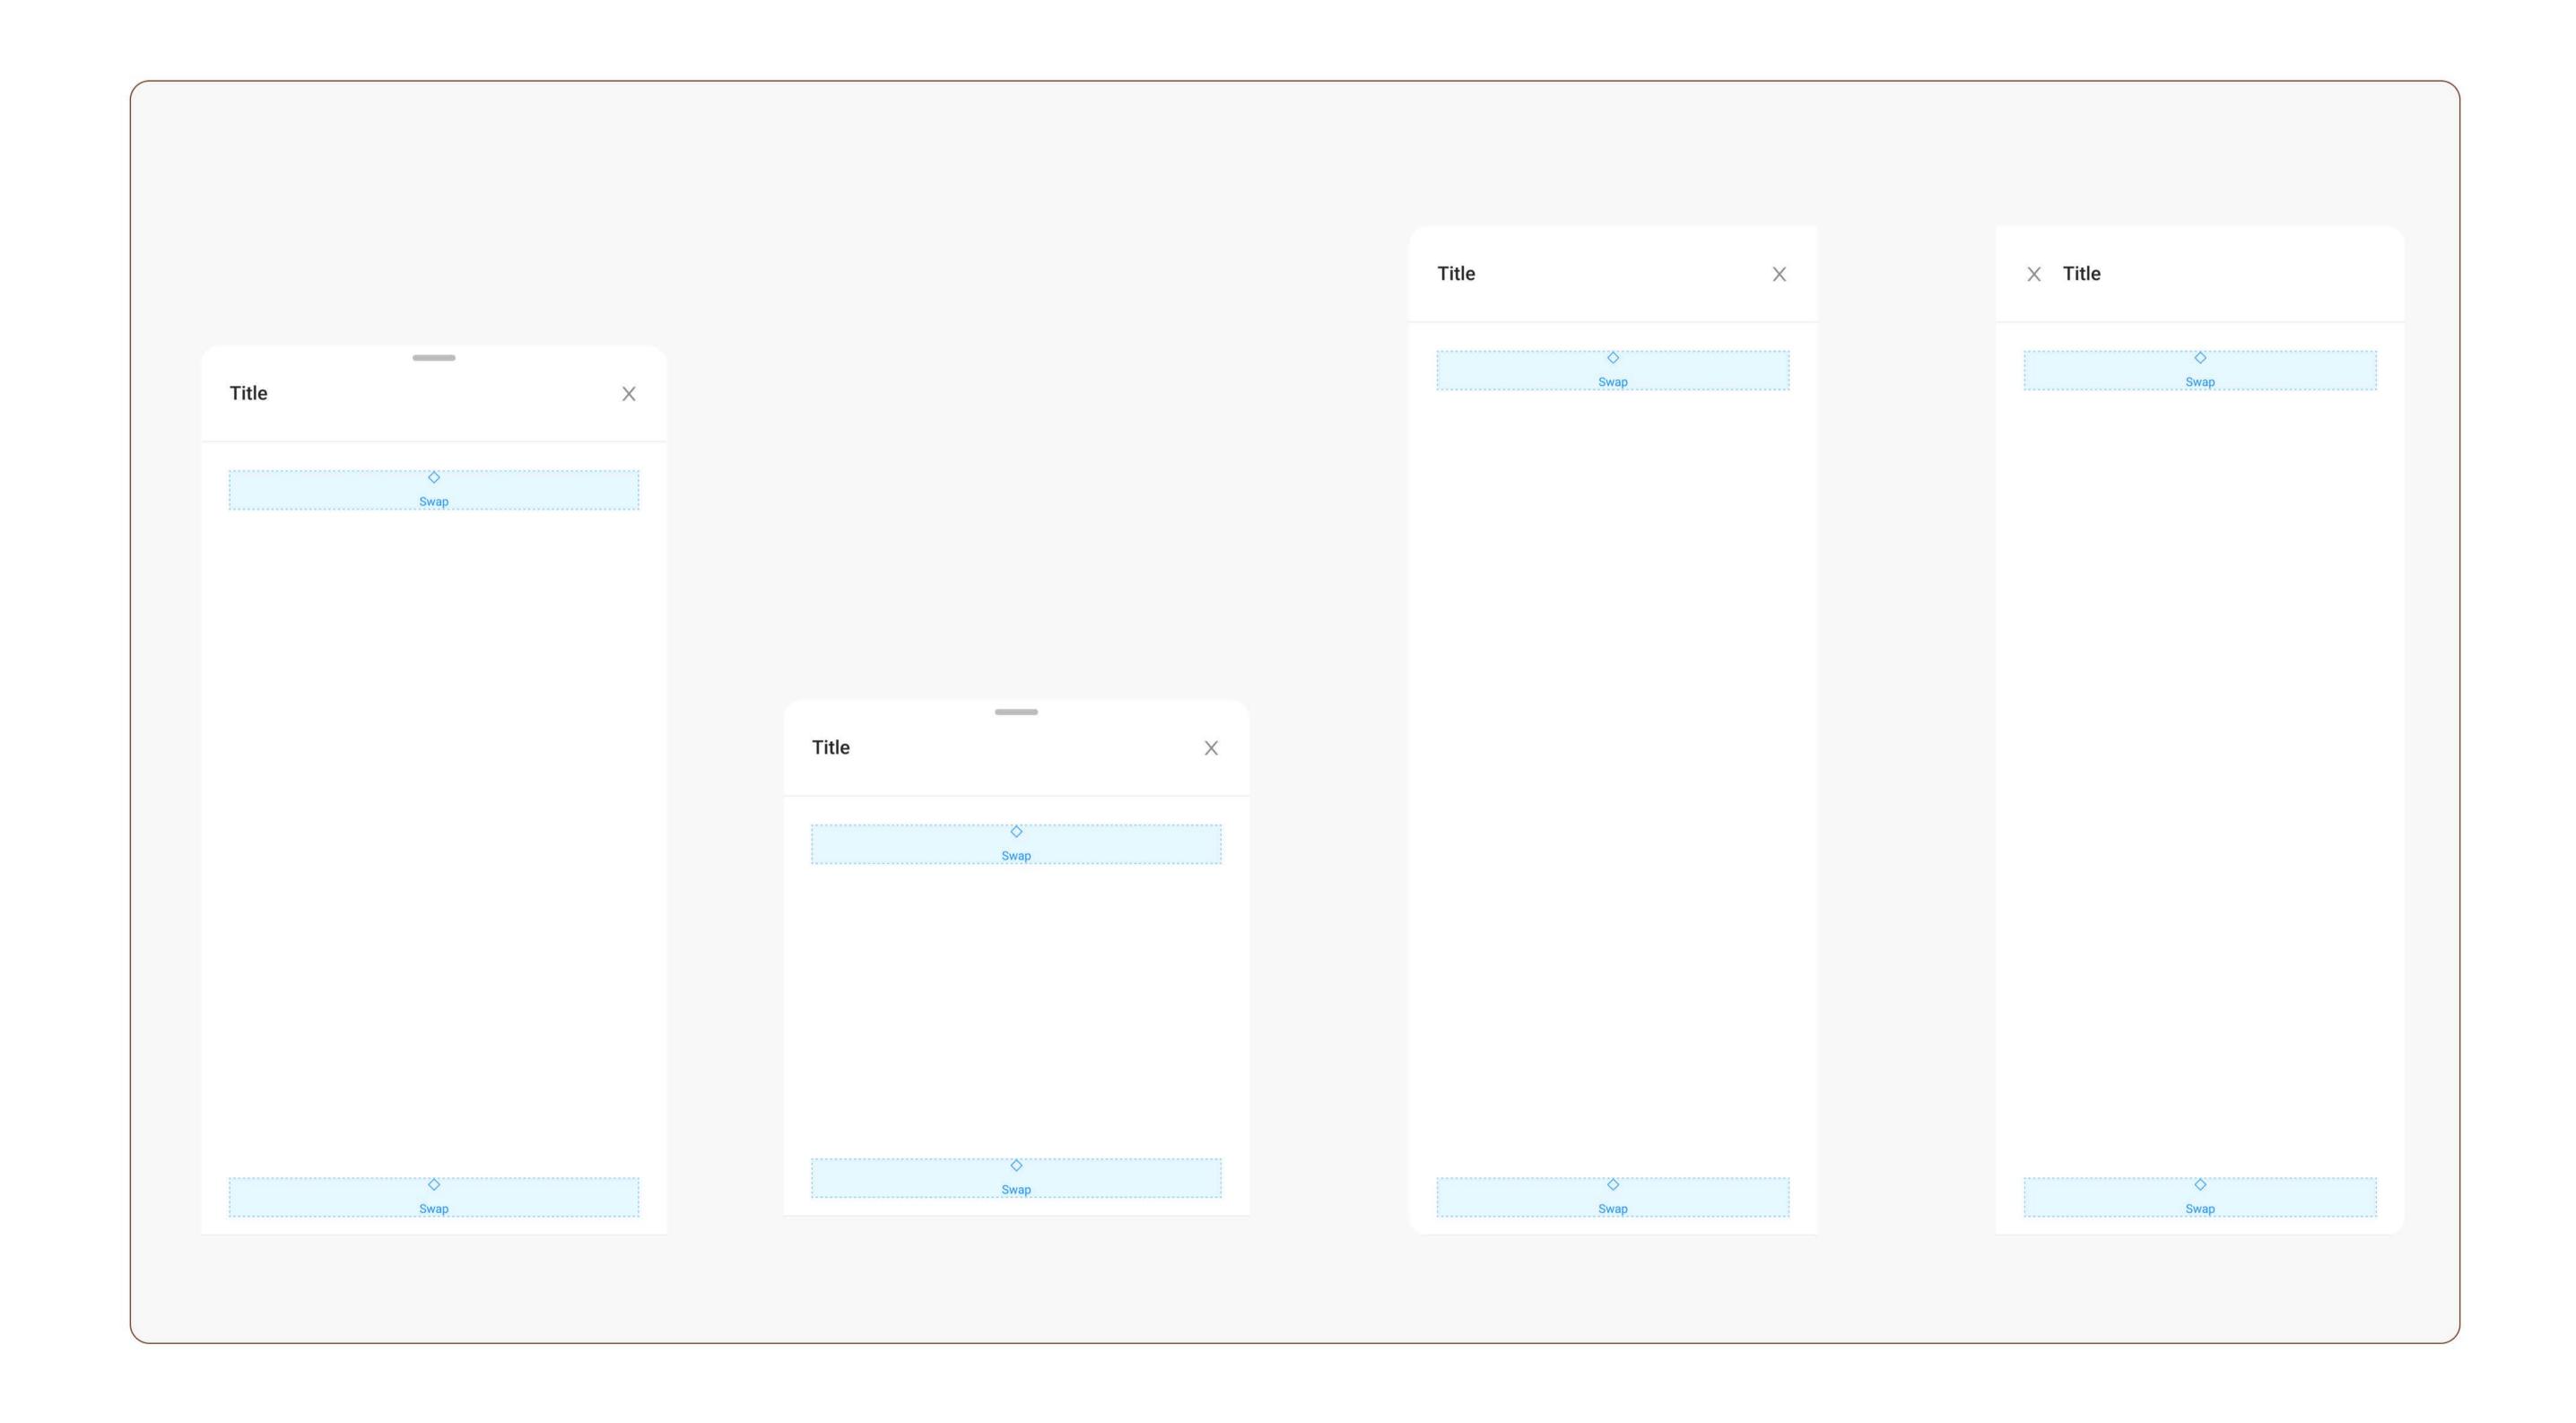

Example use

Drawers

A Drawer is a panel that is typically overlaid on top of a page and slides in from the bottom or side. It contains a set of information or actions. Since the user can interact with the Drawer without leaving the current page, tasks can be achieved more efficiently within the same context.

Input fields

Input fields allow the user to enter information in the component.

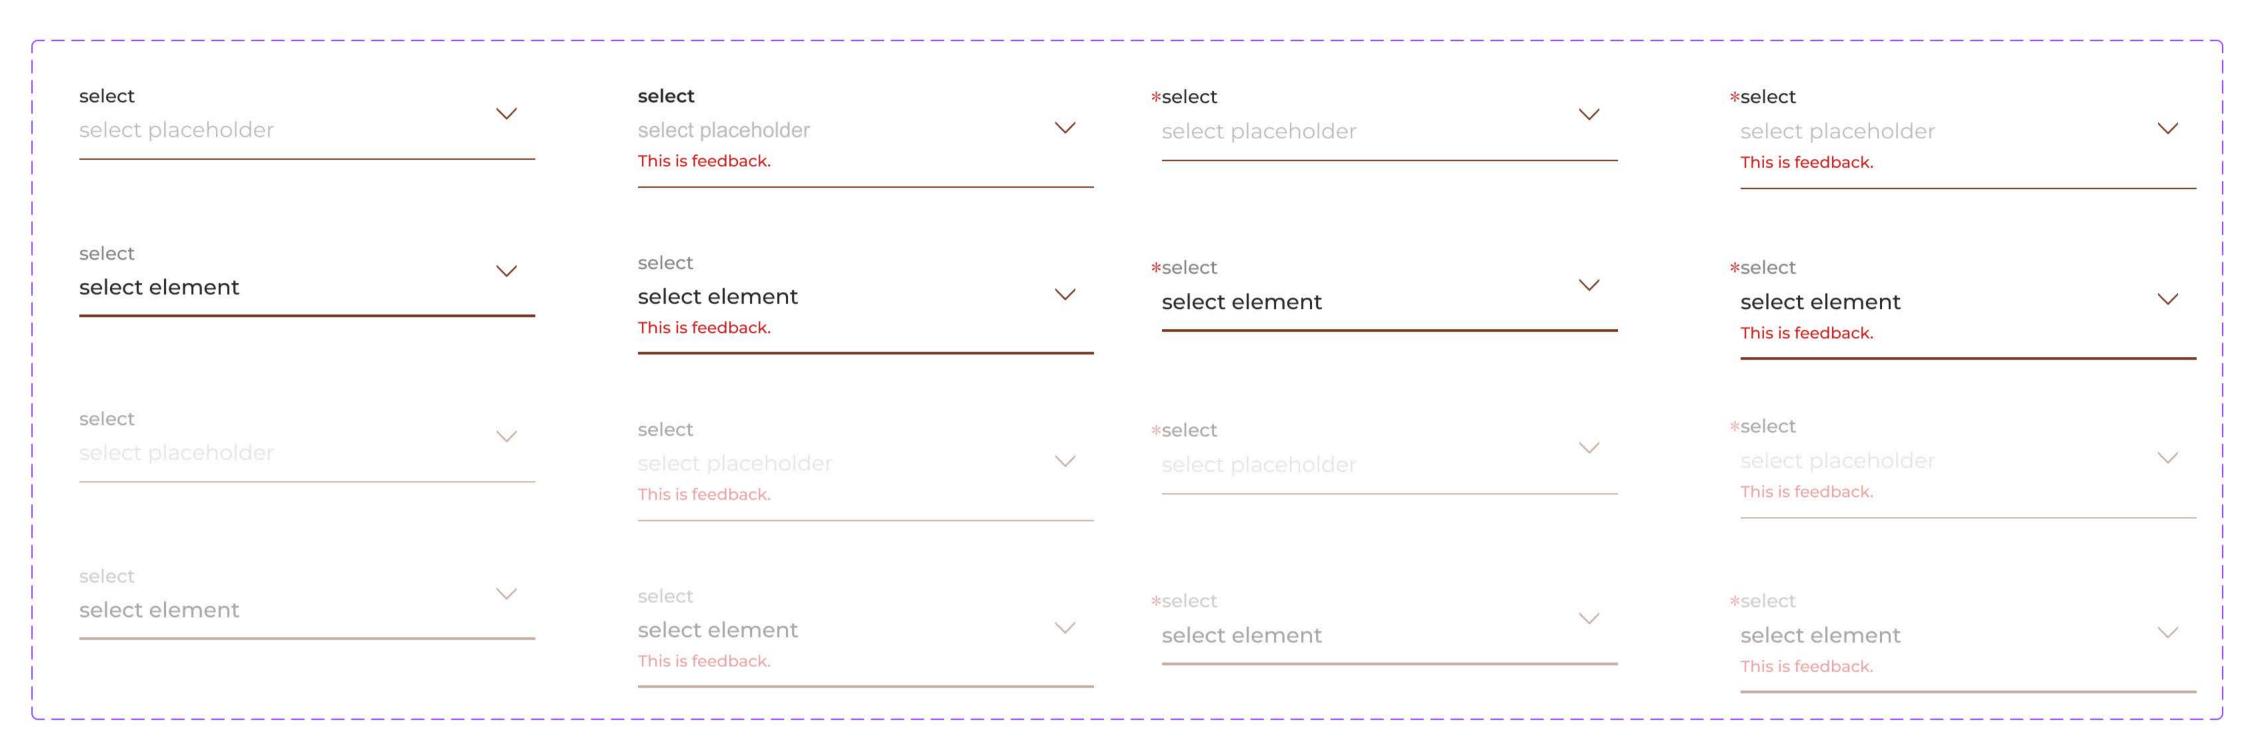

The first group below is the input fields and the second is the text fields.

Progress Indicator

Progress represented as a bar or circle graph, used for displaying the current progress of the task.

Radio buttons

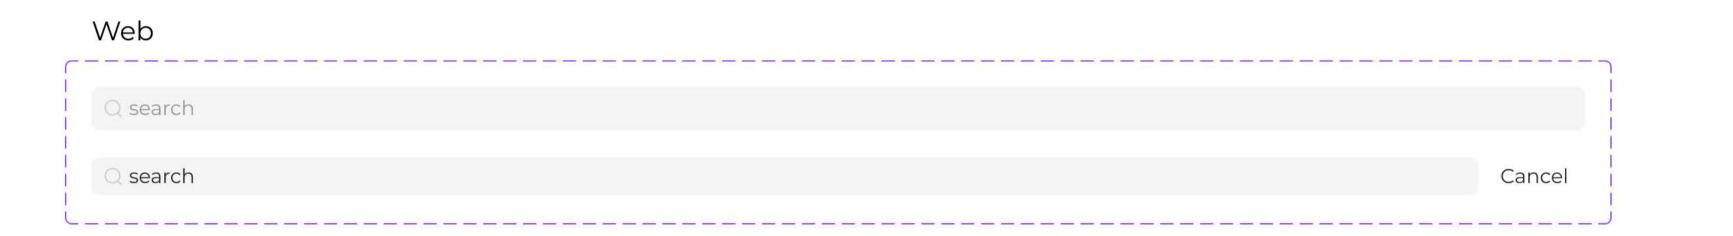

Radio button allows a user to select only one value from several options. Radio options should not be too many because all the options are default visible to a user so that the user can make the selection via comparison.

Note: Radio Button must be more than two options, and normally less than five.

Tabs

Used to navigate between different content groups.

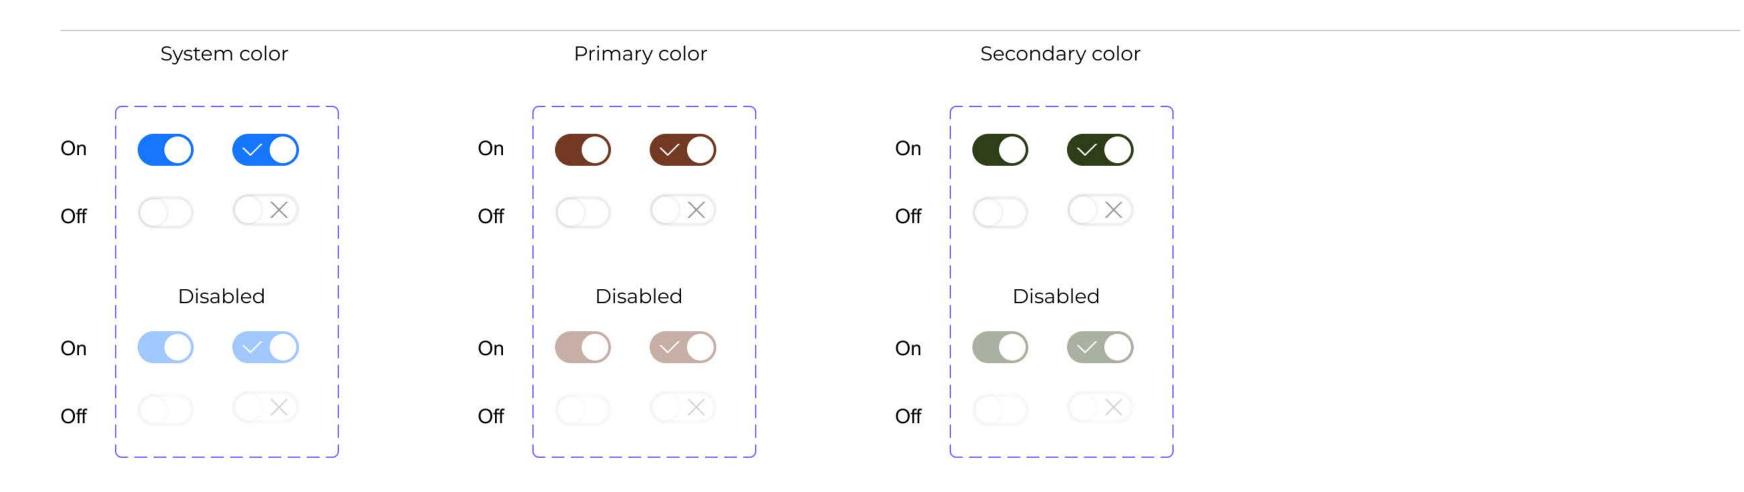

Toggle / Switch

Represents an on-off switch between two states.

Note:

The difference from checkbox is that switching switch will directly trigger state change, while checkbox is generally used for state marking and needs to cooperate with submit operation.

Example text

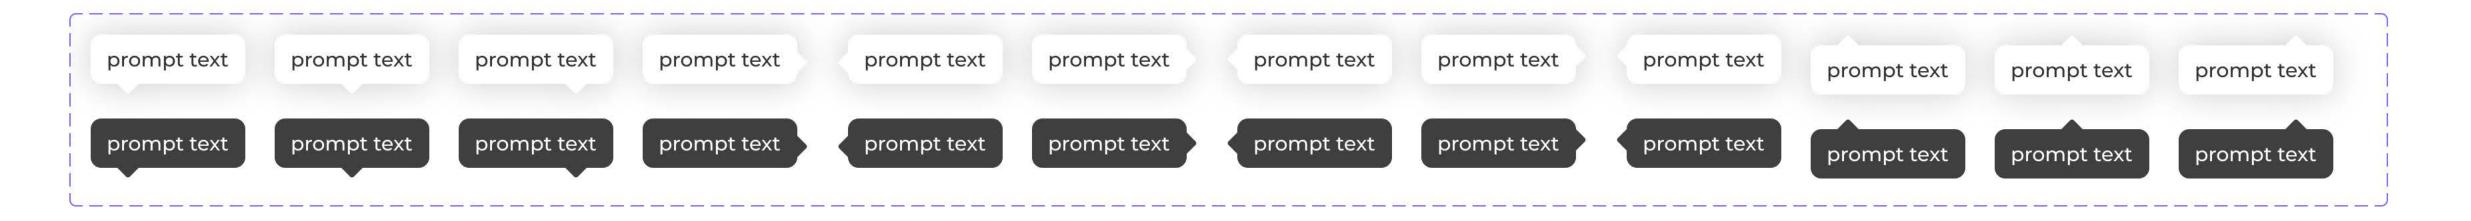

Tooltip

A simple text popup tip.

When To Use

The tip is shown on mouse enter, and is hidden on mouse leave. The Tooltip doesn't support complex text or operations.

To provide an explanation of a button/text/operation.

Top Nav Bar

The top navigation bar, positioned at the top of the screens, allows users to switch and navigate between UI views. It's for single tasks, such as going back to the previous page or backtracking a step, and for users to access account preferences or settings.
